

University of Wisconsin-Madison, La Follette School of Public Affairs
PA 974: Evidence-Based Policymaking, Fall 2017

Meeting time and location:

Instructor:

Hilary Shager, PhD

---

Course Description

This is an experiential learning course that explores the following questions and facilitates the building of skills to answer them:

- How do policymakers use research and “evidence” in their jobs?
- How can researchers make their work useful to policymakers?
- How can legislative support staff and other stakeholders use research and evidence to help shape policy?

The course will also support two outreach programs recently relocated to the La Follette School:

- The Wisconsin Family Impact Seminar (<http://wisfamilyimpact.org/>) is an award-winning program that encourages evidence-based policymaking by providing opportunities for state legislators to learn from top researchers. Seminars focus on identified legislative interests and support the following program goals: building greater respect for and use of research in policy decisions; encouraging policymakers to examine policies and programs through the lens of family impacts; and providing neutral, nonpartisan opportunities for legislators to engage in open dialogue for fostering relationships and finding common ground.
- Committee Connect, which grew out of the work of the Seminars, strives to insert research earlier in the policy-making process, when ideas are being debated and bills are being developed. Committee Connect staff meet with committee chairs and ranking minority members to identify questions of interest and rapidly respond with UW-Madison experts familiar with research relevant to their request. These experts are briefed on how to respond to legislative requests using an accessible, confidential, and nonpartisan approach to facilitate productive meetings between the two parties.

The course will involve students in both programs, and, more broadly, will cover topics including:

- What does “evidence-based” mean? What are different kinds of evidence, and how are they useful? How does one judge the rigor of research evidence?
- What is the difference between an education-based approach to working with policymakers and an advocacy-based approach?
- What are good strategies for communicating research to policymakers (including written and oral presentations, data visualization)?
- What are examples of successful evidence-based policymaking efforts?
- What are the limits of using research in policymaking?

The course also addresses the following La Follette School learning goals:

- Students will demonstrate understanding of major current and past policy debates, research findings, and analytical methodologies.
- Students will demonstrate critical thinking skills. They will retrieve and examine the policy literature and evaluate evidence for and against hypotheses, identify knowledge gaps, strengths and weaknesses in existing literature, synthesize knowledge, and develop conclusions.
- Students will read, comprehend, and effectively summarize policy research and policy-relevant academic research.
- Students will effectively summarize data for a general (non-academic) or policy audience.
- Students will communicate in clear written language: a real-world policy problem, relevant scholarly studies and practical applications, a policy-analytic method to investigate the problem, and client-oriented advice to mitigate the problem.
- Students will communicate above substance highly concisely and in language understandable to a non-specialist, as well as orally.

Texts/Materials

Readings will be available online or will be made available on the Canvas course site or directly from me. Required readings should be completed before we meet each week.

Course Assignments and Grading:

I encourage you to use this course and the course assignments to deepen your expertise in a policy area of interest and to complement your other course work. All assignments are designed to hone analysis and communication skills, and to provide experience that will be useful on the job market. Additional details and grading criteria will be provided prior to each due date.

Course grades will be based on the following:

- Class participation (general participation + some structured activities): 10%
- Group case study (~3 per group): 20%
- Family Impact Seminar and Committee Connect deliverables: 20%
- Individual final project portfolio (multiple elements): 50%

The maximum score in the course is 100 points:

100-93 = A    87-83 = B    77-70 = C    <60 = F
92-88 = AB    82-78 = BC    69-60 = D

Class participation (10%) is an essential component of the course and is critical to your learning and that of your peers. You will be expected to read assigned materials prior to our class meetings and come prepared to discuss them. Participation in structured, in-class activities such as case studies, role plays, debates, and conversations with guest speakers will also be considered. Instructions and expectations for these activities will be provided in class. Regular class attendance is a necessary, but not sufficient condition for class participation.

John Bryson offers four “hallmarks of good participation” that I recommend to you: 1) risk-taking (i.e., presenting an opposing view or a different interpretation of readings/information); 2) listening (i.e., trying to understand what others are saying and why they are saying it); 3) bringing in your own work-related and other experiences when relevant to the discussions; and

4) monitoring your own participation in terms of both “airtime” and quality.

Case Study (20%, groups of 3-ish). In groups of three (structured by Hilary based on backgrounds/interests) you will present to the class a case study in which evidence was used effectively to make a policy change. Hilary will provide some introductory materials and resources, and then your presentation must include:

- A one-page (single spaced) write up that summarizes the situation
- An annotated bibliography on the topic with at least three citations
- At least one assigned reading for the class to help provide context (write up, bibliography, reading provided to the class via email by noon Tues. before presentation)
- One discussion activity that engages the class in learning about the case and discussing course themes (could be discussion questions, role play, debate—be creative); you will have approximately 20 minutes for your activity.

Family Impact Seminar and Committee Connect deliverables (20%, groups and deadlines TBD). You will work in small groups to complete research and deliverables for this year’s Wisconsin Family Impact Seminar (to be held in late January or early February) and/or Committee Connect programs. Deliverables may include background research on the year’s topic for seminar speakers and policymakers, issue briefs, summaries of speakers’ research, feedback on presentations, interviews with participants, or evaluation development and analysis. High quality writing may be published.

Final Project (50%, individual). You will choose a policy topic/question for which research could be useful to a policymaker. (Note that you should start with a topic/question/problem/desired outcome, NOT a policy alternative or answer to a problem.) Using the education (vs. advocacy) model, you will create a portfolio of materials that can be used to effectively present policy research and policy alternatives to an audience of policymakers. Elements will be due throughout the semester; you can revise one of the earlier elements for a better grade. Elements include:

- “Setting the table” memo (10%)
- Press release (10%)
- Research summary (20%)
- A few minutes with a legislator role play (10%)
- Power Point presentation to policy audience, including research summary, example of data visualization, and policy options (30%)
- Issue brief with policy alternatives (20%)

Late work is generally not accepted, except under extenuating circumstances, and will be docked accordingly.

Disabilities

People with disabilities will be fully included in this course. Please inform me if you need any accommodations regarding the curriculum, instruction, or assessments of this course to enable you to participate fully. Confidentiality of the shared information will be strictly maintained.

Certain accommodations may require the assistance of the UW's McBurney Disability Resource Center: <http://www.mcburney.wisc.edu/>.

Academic Integrity

I expect full adherence to the UW's Academic Integrity policies, and any academic misconduct will be dealt with accordingly: <https://www.students.wisc.edu/doso/academic-integrity/>.

Course Communication

The best way to contact me is via email. I will make every effort to return emails from students within two business days. Please do not email shortly before a class, presentation, or assignment deadline with the expectation that I will be able to respond immediately to your concern. I am happy to meet with or speak by phone to students outside of class as needed. Please email me to make an appointment. You are also welcome to stop by my La Follette office (room 103). I will use the class list serve (pubaffr974-3-f17@lists.wisc.edu) to communicate additional course information as needed.

Course Schedule

Please note that the following outline and listed readings will be adjusted and updated to accommodate new materials, class needs, student interests and experience, and available guest speakers. I will also weave in articles and videos reflecting current events and issues related to program evaluation. Because this is a fairly new course on a dynamic topic, there may be requests for interim feedback, which may require further adjustment. Changes will be communicated in class and/or by e-mail in advance, and an updated syllabus will be posted on the Canvas course site.

Week 1: September 7, "What is 'evidence-based policymaking' and why are we here?"

- In-class case study
